The Mrs. R. Trundle House located at 9812 Dr. Perry Road, south of Urbana in Frederick County is not considered eligible for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Mrs. R. Trundle House is a two-story, two-bay frame dwelling constructed in the late 19th century. The house sits upon a stone foundation, is clad with German siding, and is covered with a gable roof with a central brick chimney. A contemporay single-story addition extends off of the rear of the house. The house is a common, late 19th-century rural domestic building form and lacks the architectural distinctiveness or integrity to qualify for listing on the National Register under Criterion C. The property is not known to have any associations with persons or events significant to our past and is thus not eligible under Criteria A or B.

Documentation on the property/district is presented in: MHT Inventory Files

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Trundle House is a rural two-story, side-gable, I-house that is presently undergoing renovation. The house is four bays wide and one-room deep. A one-story addition has been added to the rear of the house, along the west elevation. The addition is flush with the house on the south elevation and extends out from the house the width of one room on the north, but is set back from the front of the house. The extension has a sliding glass door. Windows are one over one and two over two. In front of this addition is a modern deck. The original house rests on a fieldstone foundation. The addition is placed on a poured concrete foundation.

Modern one over one windows have replaced the originals. A single-story screened porch, supported on fieldstone piers, extends across the width of the front of the house. Inside the porch, there are two, side by side, doors into the house, flanked on the outside by two over two replacement windows. The entire structure is clad in German siding. The roof, which used to be corrugated metal, is now sheathed in modern composition shingles. At the gable and each end of the eaves are Victorian trim. The trim is replicated on the ends of the eaves on the part of the addition that extends beyond the house. There is a single brick chimney in the center of the house.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Trundle House has been evaluated under National Register of Historic Places Criteria A, B and C. This evaluation was made according to the Maryland Historical Trust's Statewide Historic Contexts. The house does not appear to be eligible for listing under any of the criteria as it no longer retains its integrity of design, materials, workmanship, feeling, and association. Modern additions have changed its footprint, and other alterations to the building thus far in the form of replacement windows and the composition shingles on the roof give the appearance of a building more contemporary than a nineteenth century farmhouse. Renovations to house appear to be continuing. The property, therefore, does not appear eligible under Criterion C for its architectural significance.

No information was found concerning the Trundle family. They do not appear in the second volume of the History of Frederick County, which contains biographies of prominent county residents. It is not known when they arrived in the county. The house would not be eligible under Criterion B for its association with persons of significance in history.

While farming was an important enterprise in Frederick County, this particular farmhouse does not appear to be especially significant in the context of county agriculture. There are other farmhouses in Frederick County that better exemplify this occupation, and that retain more of their historic integrity. The Trundle House, therefore, does not appear to qualify under Criterion A for its association with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.
